Marketing dollars to put Highlands on the map

ERIK MARTENSSON

"Not a bad amount of zeroes" must have been what members of the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce were thinking on Tuesday when they were presented with a contribution of $250,000 from the Ontario government.

"It will allow us to do so many things," Dennis Casey, president of the Chamber told Ontario Minister of Tourism Cam Jackson. "The money that we've had in the past was certainly graciously received but not near enough. The money that you're giving us today is matched by other partners and so you've truly given us a good lot of money."

The province's contribution, spread over two years, will be combined with what is hoped to be a matching contribution from the county and help from the private sector toward the cost of a two-year tourism strategy.

"Tourism is probably one of the fastest growing industries in the world and Ontario tourism has become a huge economic driver and in some communities like this one tourism is the number one industry," said Jackson, who made the cheque presentation to Casey along with Haliburton-Victoria-Brock MPP Chris Hodgson.

"I want to reiterate that this is a catalyst to bring about more and better promotion for our area," said Hodgson. "This isn't an end in itself here today, this is a beginning. And it's by using the carrot approach, by giving some dollars

Residents question water safety in wake of Walkerton tragedy

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Is your water safe?

That's a question that's been uppermost in people's minds ever since last week's stunning news that five people in Walkerton died because they drank town water which was contaminated by a virulent strain of the E. coli bacteria.

In Haliburton County, the only people to be on a municipal water system are those living in Minden village and Cardiff townsites.

Could what has happened in Walkerton happen there?

Clayton Cameron, the public works superintendent for Anson, Hindon and Minden, says that while it's physically possible for the water source to become contaminated, there are several checks in place to ensure people would never drink that contaminated water.

Minden has a ground source well next to the Sears building on the Bobcaygeon Road. The water treatment plant on the site is owned by the municipality, but management is contracted out to the Ontario Clean Water Agency, which is the same provincial crown corporation Walkerton has brought in to help solve its problems. Minden employs one full-time person at the site as well.

The well water is treated with chlorine to kill any pathogens, such as E.coli and the equipment prints out a graph showing the addition of the chlorine. Tests are taken every week day checking the "chlorine residual" to ensure there's enough chlorine to have done its job.

Once a week, water samples are taken from several sources, including the municipal tap at the firehall, where many people come to get water. Tests are also

Gooderham school also has proud past to celebrate

THE GOODERHAM SCHOOL has been in the news a lot lately, with all the prizes its students have been winning, and on July 1 and 2, the school will be the focus of a community celebration. The Gooderham Consolidated School Homecoming will be a trip down memory lane for its former students and teachers. Along with their memories, people are asked to bring memorabilia from their life at the old school, as well as a lawnchair and an instrument, if they play one, so those good times can be renewed. Organizers would also like alumni to write a 500-word essay (it's a school reunion, of course there has to be homework) outlining their most memorable experience at the school or a short history of their life thus far. The stories will be compiled in a book kept at the library. Please let Joan McCausland know if you are coming, 447-2736.

By way of a small town introduction, Denis Grignon is married to Nancy Payne, who was born into the Sedgwick clan of Gelert. (Her mother was a Sedgwick.) They've joined her family's beef and hog operation near Reaboro but Grignon still hasn't quit his day job as a stand-up comic and freelance CBC Radio documentary producer. (He's the one who did the program, aired last week, about the Gooderham school chess program. Payne's day job is writing all the press releases for the Trillium Lakelands District Board of Education.) On June 4 at 9:30 p.m., CBC TV will air his half hour comedy episode, which includes three sketches of Grignon and Payne's popular Minivan World, which they first created for radio. It "pokes fun at all things yuppie and suburban." (You can do that if you're a comic who also can talk to farmers "quite comfortably about de-horning cattle... I don't think you'll find a whole lot of comedians who have their pork producers card.")

As an aside, a listener to Richardson's Round-up on CBC radio was so inspired by Grignon's piece on the Gooderham cheese program, he's donating 48 chess sets to the school. Since there are 52 students, there'll definitely be no shortages of opportunities to play.

Just in case people think Dysart et al has drastically hiked its parking fine from $3 to $5, as suggested by a recent letter to the editor, we're ensured that if you forget to put your nickel in the meter, the fine is still only $3 - as long as you pay promptly. It's when you don't pay right away that it goes up to $5.

Friends of the late singer/songwriter Colleen Peterson will be putting on a concert at the Market Hall Performing Arts Centre in Peterborough on June 2 to raise money for the "Save the Market Hall" campaign. The line-up includes Cindy Church, Gwen Swick, Sneezy Waters, Danny Bronson, Susan Crowe and Wendy Davis, with Jack Roe emceeing the evening. For more information contact Patrica Bronson at 705-743-0806 or e-mail pbronson@flemingc.on.ca.

The Canadian Olde Tyme Fiddle and Step Dance Contest is June 2, 3 and 4 at the Douro Community Centre (on Hwy 134, north of Hwy 7, south of Hwy 28, 10 minutes east of Peterborough.) The house fiddler is Scott Wood and his mother Carolyn and sister Kendra Norris are the house pianists. There is more than $5,000 in prize money being offered. For information call 1-800-461-6424.

The Canadian Alliance's firearm critic will speak out against firearm legislation at the Huntsville Centennial Centre (off Brunel Road behind the high school), Monday June 5 at 7 p.m.. The public meeting is hosted by the National Firearms Association.

Now that berry season is approaching, the Ontario Berry Growers Association has launched its Berry Hotline. The toll-free phone service - staffed by real people!!! - is available weekdays from 8 a.m. till 8 p.m., Saturdays from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and Sundays from 8 a.m. 4 p.m.. Call 1-800-263-3262 for information on such things as pick-your-own listings and crop conditions.

4th Line Theatre in Millbrook has two new "barnyard" productions for audiences' outdoor pleasure this year: The Devil and Joseph Scriven by Shane Peacock, "complete with a pond for baptisms, drownings and such"; and Crossings by Greg Daniels and the 4th Line Collection, "re-telling the events of the Riel Resistance 115 years ago, including the mysterious disappearance of the 80 pound Silver Bell of Batoche...a multi-voiced interconnected history to be performed on the breathtaking outdoor stages." Show times are early evening. For more information and tickets, call 1-800-814-0055 or visit the secure website at www.4thlinetheatre.on.ca.

On the weekend of June 16, Lindsay will host Ontario TimeShip 2000, a special exhibition for families about the mysteries of time, created by the Ontario Science Centre, the Royal Ontario Museum and Science North. The exhibit is free. As part of the weekend's festivities, Kawartha Lakes Summer Playhouse presents Summertime 2000: Broadway Past and Present. Tickets are $15 and can be purchased by calling 1-877-888-0038 tollfree.

Timmins High and Vocational School is hosting a homecoming reunion on August 3, 4 and 5. For information, call P. Toffanello, principal, at 705-360-1411.

Clarifications

In last week's report on Monmouth council, a comment attributed to Councillor Jim Deterling implied players at previous Fred Agnew Memorial Hockey tournaments had damaged the community centre. Deterling was referring to damage caused at other hockey events and not the Fred Agnew tournament.

The Echo regrets any confusion these may have caused.

It was reported last week that properties in the Kennisis Lake development were selling for $30 000 to $40 000. Well unfortunately, these figures were incorrect. The lots are currently valued between $100 000 and $120 000.

MPP Chris Hodgson leads fellow cabinet minister Tony Clements on a tour of the segment of Drag River rehabilitation project devoted to cleaning up 18,000 litres of fuel oil which had leaked into the ground and made its way to the river. They are accompanied by the high school students who did the work and other community partners.

Creative solutions

Community partners find way to clean up Drag River oil leak and avoid lawsuit

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

It's prettier than a lawsuit. And the winding path along the Drag River in Haliburton village was certainly a lot less expensive to build than a lawsuit.

Better still, the lessons learned by creating that pretty walkway are far more meaningful and enduring than a lawsuit.

That's why Friday's stroll along the path from the Maple Street parking lot to the Emerson/Drag River dam was of such importance to the collection of students, politicians and river enthusiasts.

A lawsuit was the Ministry of Environment's preferred way of dealing with 18,000 litres of fuel oil that had leaked into the bank on the south side of the Drag River, right in the heart of Haliburton village.

It had wanted to sue the estate of the late Harry Good, who in the 1970s, installed a tank of fuel oil behind his building (the office building across from the LCBO.) Either during installation or some time shortly thereafter, the tank was punctured and the oil leaked into the ground, and eventually into the river. Realizing what had happened, Dr. Good removed the tank and 4,000 litres of fuel oil, thinking that was it.

But it wasn't. Tests a few years ago indicated there was still 18,000 litres left in the soil. That's when the Ministry wanted to sue his estate, and whoever else it could name, as a way of getting the problem resolved.

On Friday, MPP Chris Hodgson said he and others thought there was a better way. "Everyone locally thought we could work together and have the same results" - a clean river, he said.

He approached his cabinet colleague, Tony Clements, Minister of Municipal Affairs and Housing, who agreed to help find an alternative solution.

Money was provided to hire Easterling Consultants, which came up with a way to pump the oil out of the soil over a two-year period. (The oil is pumped out and stored in an Envirodike created by the Haliburton company, Spectra Environmental, owned and managed by Steve Wilcox.)

Jennifer Ferguson was appointed as a co-op student to work with Easterling on the pumping project, and last summer, as part of the Drag River rehabilitation project, 16 local high school students were hired to build a retaining wall to stabilize the river's bank near the leakage area and create a path wide enough to accommodate the engineering equipment.

Friday's visit was a chance for Hodgson and Clements to present a cheque to the students to allow them to finish the project this summer. Hodgson said he asked Clements to come along so Hodgson could show him how effective the alternate solution had been.

"This whole project is about partnership," Clements told the gathering of the various partners, including municipal representatives, community volunteer mentors, and students and teachers from Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. "It shows what can be done when Chris and the province set their minds to doing things differently and working with the local community."

"It's also about local commitment and involvement."

Clement said this was important because the end result reflects "local sensibilities."

"(The project) takes on a whole life of its own and it's certainly something the whole community can be proud of," he said, adding "Chris was so proud of it he wanted me to see it for myself."

Michael Clarke, a director of Easterling Technologies, shares this sense of accomplishment. A former police officer who worked a lot with youth, he says it would have been easy to sue the property owners and then hire an engineer, whose likely solution would be to come in with a backhoe and strip the embankment of the contaminated soil.

Not only would this not have been good for the river - "it's better to be nice to the fish" - but it would have circumvented all of the positive outcomes now associated with the project.

"Instead of backhoes and bulldozers, it was kids with wheelbarrows and shovels," he says, noting that the students who have worked on the project have an enormous sense of pride and ownership in the river.

It also showed that solutions can be done congenially and more efficiently when all sides talk together - and then work together.

Asked why this was so important to him as a businessman, Clarke said "it's just the values I was raised with. It's so much more productive."

Friday's cheque was for $60,000, and together with $50,000 from Human Resources Development Canada, acquired with the help of Andy Campbell of the Haliburton County Development Corporation, six more students will be hired this summer, as well as Dan Selbie, an HHSS grad who has recently received his honours degree in science.

For two weeks this summer, Junior Forest Rangers will also help with the project. "When they're here, it's really something to see," says Dave Mowat, the head of the high school's science department and the man who has been spearheading the partnership.

The retaining wall on the south side of the river will be extended to the dam, where because it's such a pretty site, they've decided to build an observation deck.

There's still a major challenge in determining how to prevent further erosion of the steep part of the bank, but Mowat is confident there's another creative solution waiting to be found.

Tony Clements, Minister of Municipal Affairs, presents a cheque for $60,000 to help finish the pathway to HHSS students Jennifer Ferguson, Amy Brandon and Kim Varty, student trustee, while project leader Dan Selbie and MPP Chris Hodgson look on.

and incentive, to form a bigger and better partnership for all of Haliburton County."

"This is really a partnership initiative that as far as the county itself is concerned is going to be able to create a better awareness of who we are, where we are, what we've got and in the process bring more people in, especially during those shoulder periods, which means more jobs," said Peter Rigby, general manager of the Chamber.

The program, to be co-ordinated by the Chamber of Commerce, will help local businesses that benefit from tourism develop and enhance their products and services as well as promote Haliburton County.

"The dollars that were basically provided to the chamber are for the marketing promotion of the county. We've got a number of very specific projects and programs that we are looking at to which each of those dollars have been sort of allocated to," said Rigby referring to image branding, new web site development, familiarization tours for the media and outdoor writers, product development and seminars to help local businesses better prepare their marketing efforts.

"The bottom line is that we bring more people into the area, especially in the non-summer months, and we increase employment," said Rigby.

Both the county and province have confirmed a contribution of $150,000 this year and $100,000 is guaranteed from the province next year. The Chamber is hoping to get an equal contribution from the county next year. The Chamber is also looking to get the involvement of local private businesses.

"This is part of a three-legged platform; the first two are the province and the county, the third is basically the private sector stakeholders here in Haliburton County. We would like to be able to get participation from them in being able to insure that we are doing the marketing of the county, and in process also their businesses, properly," said Rigby.

"But the bottom line is there's no free lunch. One of the stipulations as far as the provincial money is concerned is that we use that as a lever in order to get additional partner money."

Rigby said that in some cases the Chamber would ask businesses to pay for such things as a trip to a trade show or even in-kind contributions such as a free hotel room for an outdoor writer coming to review the county. In return, the business would get recognition as a partner in the project.

"What it means to them is that they will be fully recognized, much like we have to recognize the province, in any of our promotional materials."

Rigby said an actual proposal to the private sector will be coming out from the Chamber in the next couple of weeks which talks about what benefits they gain by being part of the partnership.

"We're not expecting to raise $150,000 from the private sector; if we can raise $20,000, $25,000, $30,000 this year then that's great."

Jackson praised the Chamber for their proposal and said it was very well put together.

"I very much respected how anxious this community was to get started and how focused they were on what they wanted to do and how much support they had from the local market."

Hodgson agreed.

"It makes my job easier when I'm working with a group that can put together such a fine proposal that's a finished product and I can just hand it over to my colleague and read it."

Jackson said tourism is one of the main economic activities in the region and the government is totally committed to enhancing economic development. He also pointed out that the unique Haliburton proposal has a greater significance here than it would, "in Kingston or in Windsor or where tourism isn't their number one business".

Rigby was happy with the recognition that tourism is a very strong economic generator and that attention needs to be paid to it to ensure that Haliburton can maximize it as an economic generator.

"With our economy here in Haliburton being heavily dependent on the tourism and the seasonal resident economy, anything we can do that brings more people in, especially in the shoulder period is going to help create better employment opportunities."

Elva Bates steps down as reeve of Glamorgan before term ends

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Glamorgan's reeve has stepped down, surprising her fellow politicians who say she'll leave a big gap at both the municipal and county level.

On May 26, Elva Bates announced her decision to not finish her term of office and to resign as of May 31.

"She's going to be missed, no question about it," says Glamorgan's deputy-reeve Chuck Viner, who council has agreed to appoint as reeve. "She's been a very, very strong presence in this municipality for 30 years, not only as reeve but as clerk-treasurer.

"How can you replace that kind of experience? We'll give it our best shot."

"It is a tremendous loss to county council," says Warden Jeanne Anthon.

As last year's head of county council, Anthon says Bates "was a strong warden and made a lot of positive changes for the county."

"She's assured me she'll still be at the other end of the telephone line for me."

In a letter to ratepayers, Bates does not give her reasons for retiring early, but writes "this decision has not been made lightly. I have prayed for guidance hand have been given it; I have discussed my plan with each of my children and they wholeheartedly support me."

"I have served the township, first as clerk-treasurer, March 1967 to December 1993, then as reeve since December 1994 to the present. I have served to the best of my ability in both offices and I have made many, many friends over the years, some of whom I have never met, but have corresponded with or talked with by phone. It has been a pleasure to know you and to have been involved in the many improvements which have taken place throughout the township over the years. It has also been a pleasure to work with other staff members over the years and to see some of them move on to positions of more responsibility in larger jurisdictions."

She asks ratepayers to give Viner "the support and appreciation that you have shown me."

Glamorgan council has appointed Viner as acting reeve, with the intention of appointing him reeve at the June 12 meeting. Given that there are municipal elections in November, council has decided not to make any other changes. "We'll go with three councillors and a reeve," Viner says.

Likewise, council at present does not intend to appoint an extra person to represent Glamorgan on the transition board overseeing the amalgamation of Glamorgan with Bicroft, Cardiff and Monmouth. The transition board is comprised of all councillors from each of the four existing municipalities.

Viner will take over one of Bates' commitment on the transition board's administration committee.

As reeve, Viner will represent Glamorgan on county council for the first time, saying that will be a big change to get accustomed to.

"I'll be a busy guy for a few months."

Hodgson's criticism of Bark Lake sale goes back years

ERIK MARTENSSON

Staff Reporter

Haliburton-Victoria-Brock MPP Chris Hodgson is taking the heat for the Ontario Realty Corporation scandal but is ice cool when it comes to Bark Lake.

As the minister accountable for the ORC, the government agency responsible for selling public lands, Hodgson has been through intense questioning at Queen's Park regarding suspicious ORC land deals. He does, however, blame the peculiar land deal at Bark Lake on the former NDP provincial government while stating he was against the deal from the start.

The Bark Lake Leadership Centre, with its government-run leadership and education programs, was sold in 1996 to the Izumi brothers for $2.8 million, with no money down, after almost $10 million worth of renovations in the early 1990s.

"When I was the Warden of the County, when I was an opposition MPP, I was quite clearly on the record of being against the NDP decision to close down our program which we just spent millions of dollars on in Ontario taxpayer money where there was no market to sell it. I was in real estate at the time and I knew that there was very little market here. At the same time the government continued to fund programs in other parts of the province where there is a market and I said at the time that I thought that deal was wrong."

Hodgson says when the present Tory government came to power, the camp was already under orders to close and the ORC, then under Dave Jonhson, proceeded to sell it.

"By the time we formed the government we had already lost the jobs. The ORC was already marketing the property and the auditors will review that to see if anything was done wrongly or if taxpayers were well served," says Hodgson referring to the current investigation into Bark Lake and other ORC deals.

Hodgson says he can't comment on the people who were at the center of the Bark Lake deal.

"I don't want to influence the investigation but we have called the police, we've called in the auditors, we're doing the proper process to get to the bottom of it."

"The police are investigating and if there are criminal charges to be laid they will be," he adds.

As for the future of Bark Lake, which is now for sale for $8 million, Hodgson says he hopes something productive will be done with the property.

"I hope they create a lot of jobs in our area. That's always been my wish for that facility."

Drilled wells safer, spring water has few controls: Dr. Hukowich

done on the water before it goes into the plant.

Results are sent back to OCWA. "If the lab detects any anomalies, it alerts us by phone and the Ministry of the Environment by fax. The Ministry then contacts the health unit," says an OCWA spokesman. Minden is also automatically notified.

Cameron says the risk of contamination at the source is moderated by two main things: "Because of where our well is situated, the swamp acts as a filter and we don't have agricultural operations in the same area."

In Walkerton, the contamination should have been negated by the chlorine treatment, but it appears the equipment may not have been working properly.

"We stock spare chlorine pumps and pump parts so if something gets wrong it's fixed in a matter of minutes," Cameron says.

In Cardiff townsite, the municipal water comes from a well and is not treated with chlorine, although there is a chlorine unit at the site if it's ever needed, says clerk-treasurer Irene Cook.

"We're very careful," she says. "If there's any problem, it would be shut down immediately."

Once a week, samples from six areas are sent to testing laboratories in Lakefield. "If there are any unusual results, they'll phone us and we'll do a re-test (but) our results have always been normal."

Test results are automatically sent to the Ministry of Environment and the protocol is to notify the health unit of any irregularities. The health unit also periodically does its own tests, and there are a series of other tests done on a regular basis, as well.

Cook believes it would be very difficult to have outside contamination of the well.

Throughout the rest of the county, including Haliburton village, everyone else is on a private well.

Wells do not have their own filtration system; the water coming out of the tap is basically the same water that a few seconds earlier was deep underground.

In the wake of the Walkerton tragedy, some public health officials have been recommending that people with wells get their water tested three times a year.

In Haliburton, that's led to a bit of a rush at the local health unit office (as well as the Minden municipal building, which also stocks the water testing kits) as people ask for the testing bottles and information sheet.

"I don't want to create panic," says Dr. Alex Hukowich, medical officer of health for the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit.

Well water should indeed be checked three times a year, he says, but as part of an ongoing safety routine, not simply because of Walkerton.

"But better yet," Dr. Hukowich says, "if people's water is contaminated, they should fix their wells."

He says in terms of safe water supply, drilled wells are better than dug wells.

"Dug wells are shallow and not as safe as deeper (drilled) wells, provided (the drilled wells) are not prone to flooding."

All wells should be covered and not exposed to the elements.

"We're talking about relative levels of safety; nothing's 100 percent."

He notes that when people do get their water checked through the health unit, the results are sent to the property owner, not the health unit, so the health unit has no idea if there's something wrong.

And although the health unit regularly checks the water at places such as Dover's spring and the Hwy. 118 spring in Stanhope, Dr. Hukowich says he'd never personally drink the water from these sources.

"These untreated drinking supplies cannot be considered safe," he says. "They're not a closed system and they're not treated... A spring somewhere is always a risk...."

"I don't want people to think that 'the health unit is monitoring the water so it's safe', because it's not safe."

Even though the health unit does check the spring water, he says the problem is that a spring can be deemed safe in the morning and be contaminated that afternoon. It's impossible to check it often enough to guarantee the water is always safe.

As to the health unit's control of public beaches, which sometimes are closed because of goose guano contamination, Dr. Hukowich says the strain of E.coli found in the beach water is not the same as the strain found in Walkerton's water.

And while drinking water is allowed absolutely no trace of E.coli for it to be deemed safe, 100 parts per cubic millimetre is allowed in beach water.

However, with all of that said, Dr. Hukowich says this summer, people's biggest E.coli risk is from under-cooked hamburgers, and in the fall it will be from unpasteurized apple cider.

Walkerton a "wake up call" for those who take safety rules for granted: medical officer of health

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The Walkerton tragedy is an unfortunate "wake up call" about the dangers of taking our water supplies for granted, says this district's medical officer of health.

"Because (contamination) happens so rarely, we get lulled into this sense of safety," Dr. Alex Hukowich of the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit says in wake of the five deaths caused by E.coli contamination of Walkerton's municipal water supply. "This shows you how bad things can be if there isn't due diligence. We get complacent about our water, we take it for granted...."

"This should be a wake up call for everyone."

If drinking supplies are safe, it's only because very stringent rules - which people sometimes think are far too onerous - have been imposed. Yet because those rules are in place, and are usually followed, Dr. Hukowich says people begin to forget why such stringency is even required. Why all the rules when everyone knows our water is safe?

"The problem is when you're successful (in imposing stringent safety rules), no one notices, and if there are no problems, people think (the rules) aren't necessary... We forget why things are done and we don't see the problem. Because we're successful, then people become lax...."

"(Walkerton) shows you when things go wrong, they go very, very wrong."

He says the same phenomenon of taking safety for granted after safety rules are imposed occurs over the chlorination of water. Because water is chlorinated and is therefore safe to drink, the debate becomes whether the chlorine is safe. People forget, he says, that the water is safe only because of the chlorine.

Likewise, because immunization has wiped out many diseases, people begin to worry that the vaccine is not safe instead of realizing how many lives have been saved because of that vaccine.

"We can't decide not to do these things," such as chlorinate the water and enforce immunization, Dr. Hukowich says. "People have to pay attention to risks."

Dr. Hukowich, while not pointing a finger of blame, says the breakdown of proper procedures in Walkerton is in part due to cost-saving measures imposed over the years.

"We've tried to put more pressure on the system," he says.

At one time, health units were responsible for monitoring water safety. Then the Ministry of Environment took over, and to save money, the Ministry later gave the responsibility to the water supplier.

"In the name of efficiency and cost savings, you remove what you call 'redundancies.' You erode and erode and erode and something happens...."

"If we're trying to save money and have forgotten why we're doing these things, then Walkerton shows what can go wrong."

IMAGE BRANDING MEETING

Invitation to the Public

PINESTONE RESORT, JUNE 8, 2000

The Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the County of Haliburton and the Marketing/Economic Diversification Committee invites all interested parties to a meeting to commence the development of the new Image/Brand for the County of Haliburton.

Based on the Randolph Report, Haliburton County lacks the strong identity that is required to compete in the highly competitive tourism and economic development market place. It is our objective to create an image that will make Haliburton instantly recognizable in the eyes of tourists and businesses alike and you can help us develop that Image/Brand for the County.

Join us on Thursday, June 8, 2000 at 7:30 p.m. at the PineStone Golf and Conference Resort in the Lindsay Room.

Bobcaygeon Road work delayed

MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

The death of the man in charge of the Bobcaygeon Road improvements is causing both personal sadness for those who worked with him, and delays in the project's expected completion date.

"He was a great guy - really good to work with and he had the job on schedule," says Anson, Hindon and Minden Roads Superintendent Clayton Cameron of Bill Callow, who died of a massive heart attack at 7:30 last Thursday morning while on the job. He was only 61.

Callow was the project engineer's representative, spearheading the project from its inception.

"The whole job was his and now they have to replace him," Cameron says.

Because of this, the company that was supposed to arrive yesterday to do the curb and gutter work was unable to start work, so it's taken another job and cannot return to Minden for two weeks. This sets off a chain reaction of other delays.

"We had hoped to have the asphalt work start on the sixth or seventh of June, but now it will likely be the week of June 19th. It should be done by the end of June," Cameron says.

Until then, the roads department will continue to use calcium chloride as a dust suppressant and regularly grade the stretch from the IGA driveway to McKnight Drive.

Even when the asphalt is being put down, Cameron does not expect the road to be closed.

So far, he says, there have been few complaints from businesses about any disruptions in commerce caused by the work.

Canadian Tire on?

Council is confident plans progressing well to bring retailing heavyweight to Hwy 35 in Minden

ERIK MARTENSSON

Staff Reporter

Anson, Hindon and Minden council is being reassured that plans to have Canadian Tire as a tenant at the Minden Business Park site are moving ahead.

"By all appearances everything is normal," said Reeve Jeanne Anthon last Tuesday.

"I checked with the office this morning when I got through to the planner and they're going ahead with the site plan approval documents and there is a big Canadian Tire stamped right there on the site. I don't know who would have provided the stamp but it still looks good."

Anthon was also pleased to announce that she had been told by Haliburton-Victoria-Brock MPP Chris Hodgson that land negotiations have been finalized for the Highway 35 reconstruction. As well, Hodgson had implied that if council sent a letter to the Ministry of Transportation asking that they give priority to the Prince Street entrance when construction begins, the request should be fulfilled.

"If they start that entrance first it could be done before the rest of the highway reconstruction is done and still provide some access. Probably make Canadian Tire very happy," said Anthon.

Canadian Tire is still in the process of reviewing the site but Anthon is confident that the process is moving smoothly.

"As far as we know it's very positive and very firm and we're proceeding that way... I guess it's never in stone. It's like buying a house, it's not really yours until you fulfill all the conditions and sign the final documents. So that's where we are right now. But we're all proceeding in good faith and a good understanding of what the expectations are."

Anthon has been told by Christopher Serrie of FAI Canada Development Corporation that the deal had been approved at the first level and was moving to the second level at the end of last week. As of Saturday, she had not yet heard anything but Anthon has been assured by the developer that Canadian Tire is very serious about coming to Minden.

"Well, we've certainly not heard any differently and as a matter of fact a personal friend of mine was at a meeting involving other Canadian Tire managers and they were aware of the Minden proposal and so it seems to be acknowledged through the industry that Canadian Tire is preparing to move here so again until all the conditions are fulfilled we have no reason to believe they are not coming."

Questions on the development were raised after Canadian Tire told the Echo that it is potentially looking at the Minden Business Park site but has not yet officially confirmed that they will be a tenant on the land at Hwy 35 and Prince St. The FAI Canada Development Corporation, which is in the process of finalizing the purchase of the business park from the municipality, also told The Echo that it is not confirmed that Canadian Tire will be their tenant.

Walking for water

EACH AND EVERY YEAR, property owners in the village of Minden spend $173,000 to ensure the water that comes out of their taps is safe enough to drink.

This Saturday, dozens of volunteers will gather in Haliburton to go for a walk to raise money to dig wells in developing countries, so villagers there can also have access to a safe and reliable source of drinking water. Without the wells, villagers might have to walk miles, every day, to get enough water to provide the necessities of life. With a well, they have a communal supply in the midst of their village, a much shorter walk from their homes, thus freeing up their time for the other responsibilities of feeding a family.

One well in India – a well that can service up to 500 people – costs one one-hundredth of what it costs to run the Minden water facilities each year. At roughly $1,700 a well, last year's Walk for Water raised enough money to build the 27 wells that are being installed this month in India. (Money is matched dollar for dollar by the federal government.) This year, organizers Toos and Ron Reid hope to raise $40,000. That's enough money to dig enough wells in India to provide water for the equivalent population of all of Haliburton County.

Do we take our own clean, safe water supplies for granted? You bet.

The five deaths in Walkerton have indeed been a wake-up call for all of us who assumed that here in Canada, we are guaranteed to have safe drinking water. But as people think of how important it is to know their drinking water won't make them sick, it would be nice if they could extend their thoughts to people living in other countries. Here, we assume our water is safe; in developing countries, people must often assume it isn't. By supporting something as simple and effective as the Walk for Water, we can let those people know that our concern for safe sources of water is seen as a human right, not a local right.

Drag River's new image

Hats off to the students, businesses, governments and organizations involved in the removal of fuel oil from the banks of the Drag River in Haliburton village.

There's a wonderful irony in all of this. In the past, the wooded area that runs along the river from Maple Avenue to the top of Highland Street was known as a place where young people would congregate to do things young people were not supposed to do. Today, because of the toil and enthusiasm of dozens of high school students, that same area is becoming one of the village's attractions.

Somehow the students have made the pathway look brighter, more open, and it's becoming so pretty that this summer's plans to finish the project include the construction of an observation deck so people can pause and reflect.

The high school students' sense of pride may not be shared with all of their peers, but their clean-up efforts will certainly discourage any improper use of the pathway. The more people who use the path, the less it becomes a secretive place and its the dark sides of secrets that make people wary about venturing forth. The Drag River pathway is now enjoying its place in the sun.

An unwise society ignores the value of history and language

FOR ALL THE YEARS we lived in other countries, when asked to define Canadians we would reply "Well they are not Americans, and they are not British but before they make major decisions they tend to turn to both of these countries and look at their solutions and then find something in between."

That's what we considered Canadian, prudence, or caution, and we were proud of it.

That definition still applies sometimes, but too often now back home here, we find the loudest voices, particularly in education and politics, mouthing American solutions and making them seem so seductively reasonable.

Take for example the study of both history and languages in our schools. More and more we are being told that a greater emphasis must be placed upon practical skills in order to make our little country an important player in the new techno-age.

But stop for a moment and look at the results of nearly three-quarters of a century of de-emphasis in American schools on both those areas of learning.

First History. A recent random survey of Americans found that they have only a minuscule awareness of Canada and Canadians. That is supposed to be a surprise! What might help our bruised egos, however, would be to realize that Americans are on average equally ignorant about most any country in the world that does not either pose a military threat or offer them major economic opportunities. It is not so much that they are an insular people but that they, for many decades, have relegated the study of history, other than their own, to a position of minor significance in their school curriculum.

Summering here in Haliburton many, many years ago, we Canadian kids were amused to find that our American playmates studied only the history of their own country. Later living on the East Coast of the States we found that by then even American History was frequently an elective during the last two years of high school. Later on the West Coast of the U.S.A., more of the same.

I do not suppose that demoting the study of world history was either a thought-out majority position or that it occurred at any one single moment. Rather it would seem that gradually as the century progressed those who saw education as essentially practical training that would bring immediate economic benefits were the loudest and most persuasive.

It is rather frightening to realize that all those mightily major decisions that affect the entire world that "Washington" makes are based on so minimal an understanding of the historical forces at play. Many would say that the tragic war in Vietnam came about partly though that ignorance.

Secondly languages. These have never been dominant in the American curriculum. Two years of one other language besides English in high school is considered adequate. Yet how often Americans mistakenly envy Canadians because they think we come from a bi-lingual country where all our children are taught both mother tongues. How sad when we tell them that we have never fulfilled that promise of our founding fathers. Governor General Clarkson, a daughter of Chinese parents, as a child felt that speaking both English and French was helping her to become a Canadian. How lucky are the children in Haliburton now whose parents have worked to immerse them in our second language.

One seriously doubts that the hours spent on language and hopefully world history will in any way inhibit career choices. If anything they will have more choice and be more informed citizens if we adults can resist the push to practical training at the expense of subjects with seemingly less practical immediate application.

Stars aren't out only at night

I am absolutely exhausted! Last week was my daughter's 10th birthday and it was accompanied by much hoopla and celebration that just seemed to never end.

Since birthday mode had started on the long weekend and after the birthday lunch, the birthday dinner on the day itself, I was starting to fade a bit by Wednesday night. It was a good thing I had a good sleep because I needed it for Thursday.

A dear friend invited my two girls and I to the ballet on Thursday as a birthday present for Siobhan. My friend's daughter-in-law is a member of the National Ballet of Canada and would be performing a rather meaty role in Giselle and would we like to come. Well of course, we jumped at the opportunity, only realizing after the fact that this would mean that mother would have to drive to Toronto, by herself.

In the almost 20 years I have lived in Haliburton, I have only ever driven to Toronto by myself on one other occasion. I have no sense of direction and so even though the Mega City runs in a north-south grid, it doesn't help me at all since I don't have a clue where I'm starting from.

At any rate, my girls were so excited I felt I could tackle the challenge. Armed with a map and a cell phone, we set out bright and early and arrived right when we were supposed at the home of our friends. We then took the subway to Union Station which in and of itself is quite a treat. As we walked up to the Hummingbird Center, the girls were so excited I thought their eyes were going to pop out of their heads. They had never been to anything like this before and to watch them take it all in was wonderful.

The ballet was breathtaking. The set, the dancing, the music, all woven to tell the story of a young peasant girl and her true love. Sophie was on the edge of her seat the whole time. Our friend was fabulous, seemingly floating somewhere above the stage. Siobhan said she looked just like the ballerina in her jewelry box only prettier. It ended all too soon, or so we thought, as there was much more excitement to come.

Our friend had invited us backstage and with great anticipation, we waited while the crowd thinned so we could get to the stage door. As we were waiting, my friend turned to me and said, "Anne, come and meet Kurt Browning".

Well, I just about flipped. Yes, a mere two people away from me was one of my all time favourite figure skaters. I know, you're supposed to act very blasé and not show how impressed you really are. I think I just kept nodding with a really stupid grin on my face as he chatted pleasantly with us. Then to add to the equation, who else is sitting there but Scott Hamilton, yet another favourite. The girls and I were just flabbergasted.

There we were, the three country bumpkins shmoozing with some pretty worldly people. Who knew? We were fairly well-controlled until we moved out into the hallway.

There we found ourselves separated from our friends and standing beside two extremely attractive people. As we smiled and made small talk about the ballet, I found myself thinking I had seen the man before. I kept looking at him and saying to myself, "I know you from some where. You look like a skater... which one, oh yes, I think you're Steve Cousins" at which point I turned to the woman beside him and blurted out in a really uncool voice, "So Ohmigawd, you must be Shae-Lynn Bourne!"

She was extremely lovely about my lack of control as we blubbered on about how much we loved when she skated to Riverdance and how is her knee after surgery and will she be skating again this year? The rest is a bit of a blur as we moved backstage to give congratulations to Andrea, our own star and met some of the other people who danced.

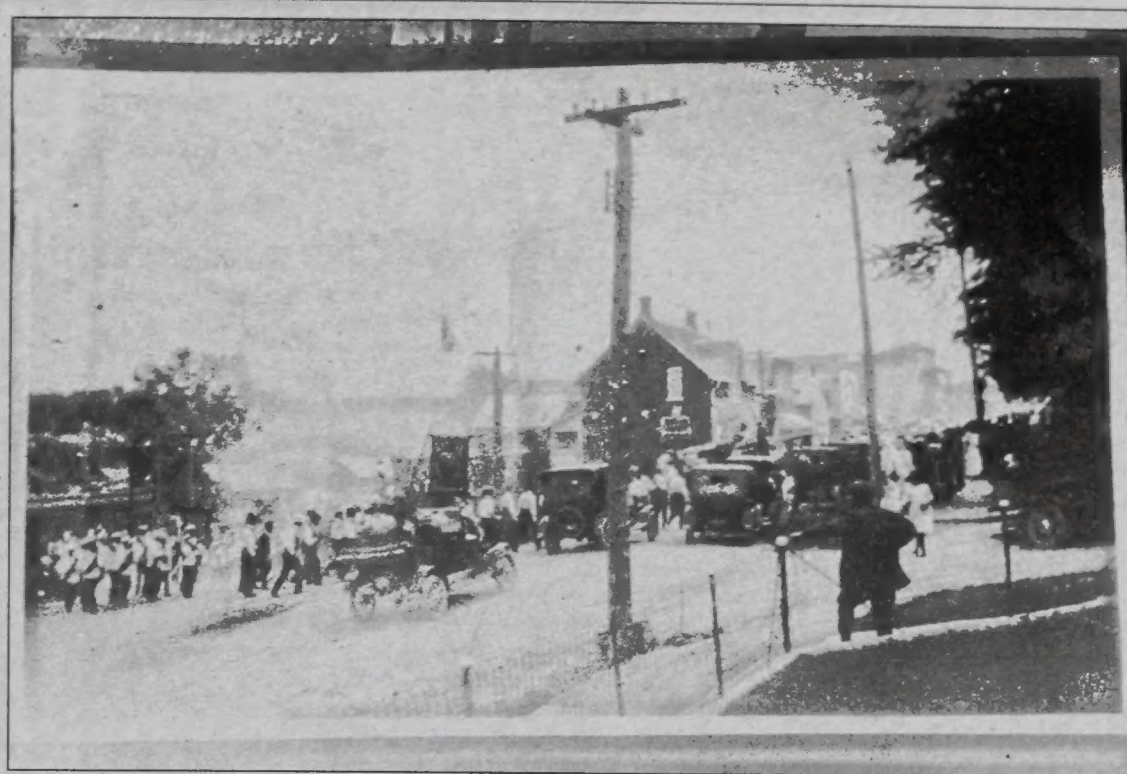

All the way home, the girls and I talked non-stop about the day we had had and how we couldn't wait to tell Dad and Max. It was quite a magical day.

The stars were out in full force, on and off stage, and in our eyes as we relived our day for the fellas at home. Max asked Siobhan what the best part of the day was. She said she loved it all but she thought the best part was that Mom drove to Toronto and back without any problem. What a kid! I guess we've all got star quality.

THIS PHOTO OF A PARADE going down the main street of Haliburton was taken from Laking House, which is now the offices of the Haliburton County Echo. Given the banner some of the marchers are carrying, we wonder if it's an Orange Day Parade, and we think by the models of cars, the time is some time in the early 1920s. Our thanks to Jack Hoxie for the photo, which is part of the collection at the Haliburton Highlands Museum. Alcohol and Health

The good, the bad, the bottom line

ALCOHOL FOR "medicinal purposes" has been a long established tradition. In the last few years there have been reports widely published in the press that drinking is "good for your heart".

But is drinking alcohol in small amounts advantageous enough to counter the well-established risks to your health?

Family doctors have to sift through these conflicting opinions and advise their patients. Here is our attempt to make sense of this difficult issue. For the purposes of this discussion, one standard drink is defined as one bottle of beer or one 5 oz glass of wine or 1.5 oz of spirits. This is important as the amount a person drinks determines both benefits and risks.

The good news:

There have been several studies which show that people who use alcohol in small amounts have an approximately 30% reduction in death rate from heart disease compared to non-drinkers. The risk of stroke is also reduced. Most of this heart protection occurs at very low levels of alcohol use (a standard drink every other day up to two standard drinks a day). Higher levels don't add benefit.

Sporadic heavy drinking can be harmful to your heart and increase risk of stroke.

doctors' note

by Haliburton Family
Medical Centre doctors

Patients who would benefit the most from alcohol are those at most risk for heart disease; middle-aged and elderly men and women after menopause. For young men and women under 50, the benefits are not that great. The type of alcohol is not likely important although there is an indication that red wine might be better.

The bad news:

The risks from heavy alcohol use are well known; addiction and all the social and family tragedy that flows from that abuse. As well, there are serious physical health risks; liver disease, death and injury from accidents and increased risks of certain cancers. Even moderate alcohol use is associated with slight increased risks in these areas particularly risk from motor vehicle accidents.

The bottom line:

Those who currently do not drink alcohol should not begin drinking in order to reduce their risk of health problems. If you think that you are at high risk for heart disease, you can accomplish far more by reducing or eliminating risk factors: quitting smoking; checking on your blood pressure and cholesterol levels; getting regular exercise; and eating a healthy diet.

For those who do drink, it is advisable to not exceed two standard drinks a day and lower levels might be recommended to people with lower body weight (women). To minimize any risk of addiction there should be at least one day a week when no alcohol is consumed. Pregnant women should not drink at all nor should individuals on certain medications and anyone with a history of substance dependence.

Haliburton women's soccer team begins season with two impressive wins

TANYA SISSON

Special to The Echo

The Haliburton Women's Soccer team began its summer season two weeks ago in Lindsay.

Their first game took place May 18 against the Mariposa Electric Chargers. A strong offence brought the girls a 3 - 1 win.

Goals were scored by Kelly Ketner and Inge Haedicke with two assisted by Traci Hubbert and Crystal Alton. Impressive play by Inge Haedicke.

The women's second game took place Thursday, May 25 against LCVI. Despite the cold, the women took a 2 - 0 lead in the first half off goals from Traci Hubbert and Tanya Sisson.

In the second half, with the wind against them, Tanya Sisson netted two more goals, one assisted by Heather Little. Final score, 4 - 0 Haliburton.

Outstanding play by Liz Brown and shut-out by Kelly Dawson.

The women play again this Thursday against UPI and hope to notch another win.

Get fit, have fun

The students at Stuart Baker Elementary School recently celebrated Sneaker Day by having an aerobics class outside before school started. Led by teacher Nancy Bishop and accompanied by some catchy work-out tunes, the students learned that incorporating physical activities into their regular day was fun. Obviously, Jordyn Britton and Quinn Schell, at left, as well as these two boys, above, seem to be enjoying it.

Nine HHSS athletes advance to the all-Ontario finals in Windsor this week

LIANE DRON
Special to The Echo

The Haliburton high school track and field team travelled to Kingston to compete at the East Regional's meet last Thursday.

Battling high winds and rain, 28 individuals and four relay teams competed in hopes of qualifying for OFSAA, the all-Ontario championships which are June 1, 2, and 3 in Windsor.

Athletes had to come in the top four of their event in order to advance. Although the competition was fierce, seven individuals, including two sets of brothers and sisters, and one relay team managed to come out on top.

Congratulations to Jordana Bain, Travis Bain, Kate Campbell, Shane Campbell, Nicole Cooper, Scot Curry, and Caley Sisson, as well as the senior girls' 4 x 100 m relay team for their accomplishments, many of which were personal bests. Good luck at OFSAA!

These athletes will be advancing to the All-Ontario championships in Windsor after posting the following results:

Jordana Bain - 400 M Int Hurdles Senior Women, 4th.

Travis Bain - 100 M High Hurdles Midget Men, 3rd.

Kate Campbell - 400 M Int Hurdles Senior Women, 1st.

Shane Campbell - Pole Vault

Junior Men, 3rd.

Nicole Cooper - Discus Throw Senior Women, 2nd.

Scot Curry - 110 M High Hurdles Junior Men, 4th.

Caley Sisson - Pole Vault Open Women, 3rd.

Relay Team - 4 X 100 M Senior Women, 3rd.

Clockwise from top: Scot Curry, foreground, came fourth in the 110 m high hurdles; Cassie Hie, at right, ran the hurdles; Travis Bain came third in the 100 m high hurdles; the senior girls relay team of Jordana Bain, Meagan Kennedy, Kate Campbell and Amy Brandon will represent HHSS at the Ontario finals; and Nicole Cooper came second in the discus.

Manning rolls his dice in Ontario

ERIK MARTENSSON

Staff Reporter

Some will say that Preston Manning provides the blueprint of a political gambler. That he's taken a major risk by resigning his post as the leader of the Reform Party, a party which he founded 13 years ago, and thrown his hat into the leadership race for the new Canadian Alliance.

Why did he do it? Because he concluded that the Reform Party couldn't make the electoral gains east of the Manitoba border it needed to occupy the PM's office. Striving to shake the notion that the Reform Party only has Western interests in mind, the Canadian Alliance was formed.

The Alliance is now in the midst of a leadership race that pits Manning against newer, younger and perhaps more-media savvy candidates.

"Some commentators will say that a new party like the Canadian Alliance needs a new leader, but I think what voters will say when they start looking at the Alliance and its leadership in the next election, is that a new party needs an experienced leader," Manning told a town hall meeting at the Lindsay Legion on Friday.

Manning stressed that all the candidates are "quality people who bring different backgrounds and different perspectives to the Alliance," but in order to be successful the party needs a leader with experience.

"If you want to be a national political leader you've got to spend time on the national stage, if you want to be a federal leader you've got to spend time on the federal stage. You've got to do political work, not just in your own region - your own province, but in every part of this country," said Manning, who stepped down as leader of the official opposition during his leadership campaign.

In a grassroots campaign, shielded from the media spotlight, Manning refers to the Canadian Alliance leadership race as a race to be the next Prime Minister. His campaign slogan is PM4PM.

Manning continually refers to the seven years he has spent in Ottawa along with his other "qualifications".

ERIK MARTENSSON/Echo

Preston Manning plays to the Lindsay crowd

"If you want the next Prime Minister to be a leader of change, a democrat with experience, and a builder of coalitions I'm ready for that job and would welcome your support."

Seeking to overcome the notion that he cannot succeed in Ontario, Manning blamed previous Reform defeats in the province on vote-splitting with the Conservatives.

"In Ontario twice, in 1993 and 1997, we got almost a million votes but it didn't turn into seats because of the vote-splitting. The Conservatives would do quite well, we would do quite well, between the two of us we'd get more than enough votes to win the seat and yet the Liberal, because we divided the vote, would get it."

Asked by The Echo about the split between the east and west factions of the party, Manning denied that it would hurt the Alliance.

"We're encouraging everyone to get one level above that and say we'll support the Alliance regardless of where the leader comes from, either geographically or political party background. I think by far the majority of the Alliance members support that decision. They wouldn't put this together if they took any other position."

In a speech that took several shots at the Prime Minister, Manning criticized Chretien for his "contempt of the taxpayer" which was hurting rural and small town economies and also lambasted the Liberal government's controversial Bill C-68.

"The people you want to get at are not going to be got at through that registry."

"Our position on Bill C-68, the gun control bill, is to repeal it and replace it with criminal code amendments that come down hard on the criminal use of firearms. That's where we think the problem is and that's where we'd like to see the emphasis," he added.

As for the environment, Manning told The Echo that the current system is also not working.

"The regulatory system in this country as you know is fragmented between municipal governments, the federal government, and provincial governments so a lot of things just fall through the cracks. We propose what is called the one window regulatory system where each of the levels of government delegates their environmental regulatory powers to regulatory authorities that are built over ecosystems. It could be the Great Lakes or the St. Lawrence or whatever. A regulatory authority to which the federal and provincial and some municipal governments would delegate their authority."

The Canadian Alliance will be choosing its first national leader on June 24 in a "One member - One vote" election. If a second ballot is required the vote will be held on July 8.

Tom Long and Keith Martin, who are also campaigning for the leadership, were also in Lindsay last week but The Echo was not told of their visits and therefore could not attend the events.

Changing of the guard

JDHES Principal McKay

Brydon gets ready for retirement while Michael Burke prepares to take his mentor's place

DEREK MALCOLM

Staff Reporter

Students at Haliburton County schools will be seeing some new faces in the halls this coming fall as recent principal changes mean new challenges for some, and a more relaxed life for others.

Although he's not leaving Haliburton, J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School Principal McKay Brydon announced his retirement after 30 years as an educator in Haliburton County.

A teacher for 11 years, then holding vice principal or principal positions for 19, Brydon has watched the children of Haliburton County grow up.

"You see how so many people go on to become good parents and good people. You see a life cycle, and it really inspires you," Brydon said.

In an interview, Brydon fondly remembered his first classes at the Lakeview school, and is grateful for all they taught him because it "helped me understand kids better."

A special place in Brydon's heart is held for Stuart Baker, former Director of Education of Haliburton County, and former Principal at Archie Stouffer Elementary School when Brydon was vice principal there.

"He was my mentor," Brydon said. "I learned a lot from Stuart which I was able to share with other people."

"I'm happy about retiring. I think everyone has a time to go - and it's my time to go," Brydon said, and when asked to recount some of his outstanding achievements, he could only praise those he's had the experience of working with and guiding over the last 30 years.

"I don't think principals have outstanding achievements, I think that teachers and kids have outstanding achievements," Brydon said.

Brydon plans to travel and to continue living in Haliburton. However, "the first thing I'm going to do is rest," he said.

Taking over for Brydon in the fall is Irwin Memorial Public School and Dorset Elementary School Principal Michael Burke, who was interviewed by Brydon for his first principal position

"It's like coming home for me," said Michael Burke, with wife Pat, on his way to the Principals office as he takes over for the Retiring McKay Brydon at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School in the fall.

Grade 6 students (from left) Ryan Bottum, Benton Brown, Max Creelman and Jessica Trantau smile for the camera with retiring J. D. Hodgson Principal McKay Brydon. "You see a life cycle and it really inspires you," he said of all the students he's seen grow up and move on over the last 30 years.

back in 1989.

"I think he's too young to retire," said Burke. "He's energetic, and has a lot of great ideas. He's often the person I give a call when I have a problem ... so I guess I'm going to miss that."

A cottager in Haliburton since 1976, became principal at Victoria Street School where he stayed until moving to HHSS for a year as vice-principal before becoming Dorset Elementary's principal in 1993. Ironically, the students who were under Burke at Victoria Street have since moved on to J. D. Hodgson.

"It's like coming home for me," Burke said. "It's closer, and I wanted the challenge of a bigger school."

Confessing to spending a lot of time in the principal's office himself as a youngster, Burke has since turned himself around, becoming an active member of the community. Working with other individuals, Burke helped amalgamate Haliburton's Family Services into Family Services of Haliburton County, and is a director with the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association (HCSA).

Huntsville High School Vice Principal Kevin Cutler has been appointed to fill the void left by Burke at Irwin Memorial and Dorset.

After two years at Huntsville, this is Cutler's first appointment as principal. And while he settles in to the new position, he's prepared for the challenge of a younger group of kids.

"You have to adjust your expectation levels to the age you're dealing with," said Cutler, who is excited about meeting all the parents and students in the community.

If the twinning of Wilberforce Elementary and Gooderham Elementary is approved, next year Principal Georgianna Boyle will have her hands full.

"I'm looking forward to working in both of them," said Boyle, who has been the principal at Gooderham Elementary for the past three years. Overseeing the schools' 160 combined students means that Boyle, who also teaches, will be spending less time in the classroom.

The twinning of Wilberforce and Gooderham will put Cardiff Elementary School on its own. Toronto educator Wendy Penhale has been hired and appointed principal.

As for the future of current Wilberforce and Cardiff principal Jim Riehle: "Next year, I'll be walking to school," he said.

The three-hour commute from his home in Lindsay has taken its toll on Riehle, leading to his resignation after spending the past year in Haliburton.

When there were no principal positions available in Victoria County, Riehle took the position in Haliburton "to get some experience as a principal," he said.

Riehle has since been assigned the vice-principal's role at a school in Lindsay, close enough for him to walk, but he said that Haliburton will always hold a special place in his heart.

In other principal changes, Rick Thorne was appointed vice principal at Archie Stouffer School in Minden in March.

Jacqueline Grech, Devin Hunter and teacher Blake Paton are back at Gooderham School after picking up their virtual classroom award in Hong Kong.

Hong Kong travellers back in the swing of things

DEREK MALCOLM

Staff Reporter

After a journey half way around the world to meet their virtual peers, two Gooderham Elementary School students and their teacher returned to their real-life classmates on Friday ready to share their experiences of the sights, lifestyles, and flavours of Hong Kong.

"Instead of wide buildings, they have tall buildings," said 11-year-old Devin Hunter, before rhyming off population statistics for China and Hong Kong.

Hunter, Jacqueline Grech, and teacher Blake Paton were flown to Hong Kong representing their class as winners of the AT&T Virtual Classroom Contest.

"The whole point of the program is to foster international co-operation, and cross cultural co-operation through working together on real projects," said Paton.

Gooderham's team, paired through the internet with a school in Florida and another in India, beat out 99 other teams from 38 countries. All of the winning teams were allowed to choose two representatives and their teacher to travel to Hong Kong for the awards ceremony last week.

"They actually look a lot different than what they told you," said Hunter of his American and Indian team mates with whom they enjoyed the Hong Kong sights.

Sights such as the giant Buddha at the Polin monastery, the world's largest sitting Buddha, and Victoria Peak, Hong Kong island's highest point at 550 metres, gave the students a great view of the many tall buildings lining the coast.

A restaurant on the peak provided the students a chance to experience some authentic Chinese cuisine, even if it didn't go over too well. "We ate this steak there and as soon as you put it in your mouth it just burned," said Hunter.

And while it was the Peking Duck that satisfied Grech's appetite, she was much more interested in the abundance of shopping malls the city offered, bringing back a "T-Dog 2000," a Furby-like robot dog. "I don't exactly know what it does yet," she joked.

"It was interesting to see how people cope with such a dense population area," said Paton, and Hunter would be quick to tell you that there are 6,000 people for every square kilometer in Hong Kong with a population of seven million.

With all the scenery, history and people on the trip, "I'd actually have to say my favourite part was staying in the hotel," Hunter said of the 35-floor Marriott Hotel.

But for Paton, staying on the 23rd floor wasn't as impressive as the important lessons everyone involved had the chance to learn. It was an opportunity for him to learn about other teachers and systems from educators and students from around the world.

"I think the highlight was meeting the other teachers and visiting the private schools there," he said. "We also shared common problems and pressures. We all have common annoyances."

Paton and his class will have the opportunity to enter the contest again next year.

Caught in the spotlight

Reports of Elk echo in the Highlands

DEREK MALCOLM

Staff Reporter

Put your glasses on, you may have just seen an elk.

Residents just north of Haliburton village have been getting a rare look at some newcomers to the area.

When Fred Mawbey was on his way to work last week, driving down Boughner Road near the Harburn Road, he saw what at first looked like a pair of moose near a pond.

"The whole back end of them was white. Very distinctive," says Mawbey. "I first thought moose, but then I thought there's no moose up here with white rear ends."

He noticed that they had tags on their ears and collars with a small black box on them – just like the ones fitted to the 70 elk transplanted in Bancroft last January as part of the Provincial Elk Restoration Program.

"Nobody believed me when I got to work. (They said) you saw a pink elephant!" Mawbey laughs.

The elk, brought here from the overpopulated Elk Island National Park in Edmonton, are being tracked by the Ministry of Natural Resources, their Wildlife Research Section, a group of volunteers known as the Local Implementation Committee and others to monitor their progress.

Let loose in the Gin Lake area near Bancroft, they usually stay within a 30 kilometre range of the release area, says Vince Ewing, an MNR biologist.

"Most of the animals have been staying around the release site for much of the winter," he said, adding, however, that over the last week or so they've been dispersing because "they don't have clearly defined home ranges."

Ewing has received around 80 phone calls from people all over the county who have seen elk, including the reports from the Haliburton area. "I do believe that the animals seen in the Haliburton area were in the Wilberforce area for much of the winter," said Ewing. "I don't know if it's the same two animals but I suspect that it is."

Ewing has received reports of sightings in the Paudash Lake area, Wilberforce, north of McArthur Mills, and south of Bancroft in the Lingham Lake area.

For the most part, tracking the animals with their radio collars can be done from the ground base in Bancroft. But as the elk spread out, they are more effectively tracked from the air using remote devices. And while Ewing awaits results from the most recent aerial tracking surveys done last week, the MNR and the teams working on the project still rely on public reports. "We really want to encourage folks to call when they see them. It gives the radio trackers places to go to," Ewing said.

Of the 70 elk placed in Gin Lake, 10 have died from what Ewing speculates as starvation. He won't know for sure until they have been studied further at the University of Guelph.

"It's certainly discouraging after a winter as easy as this (was)," Ewing said.

However, with 60 still getting accustomed to their new surroundings, Ewing believes that the program has "an impressive success rate."

If you see an elk in your area, please feel free to report it to Vince Ewing at The Ministry of Natural Resources in Bancroft: (613) 332-3940 ext. 259

Minden council reassured by reports from Ontario Clean Water Agency

ERIK MARTENSSON

Staff Reporter

The following are brief reports of items discussed at the May 25 meeting of Anson, Hindon and Minden Council.

Council is reassuring the public that Minden's water supply is safe at a time when Walkerton's E Coli outbreak is on everyone's mind. Minden's water system is managed by the Ontario Clean Water Agency, the same agency that Walkerton has asked to manage their system for the next six months. The municipality has been with them for about two years.

Roads Superintendent Clayton Cameron went over the safety features and testing procedures that Minden's water supply goes through for council.

"The possibility of that happening here is very, very remote," said Cameron.

Highway 35 reconstruction

Reeve Jeanne Anthon informed council that she had spoken with MPP Chris Hodgson and he had told her that planning for the reconstruction of Hwy 35 is moving smoothly. All the land matters have been dealt with and the Ministry of Transportation is expected to meet with council soon to discuss a schedule. Council will request that the Prince St. entrance be given first priority.

Extra policing costs

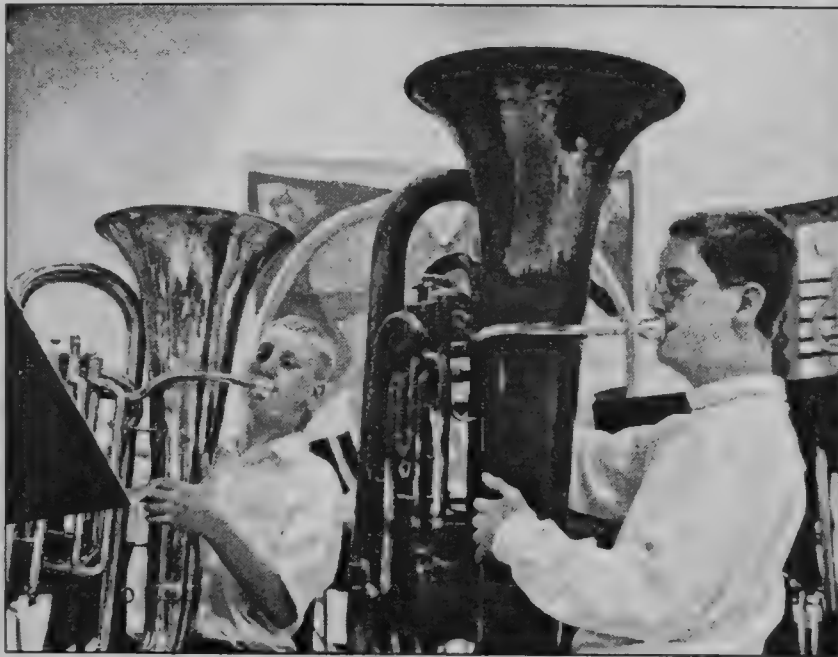

Council discussed the rise in policing costs for the municipality. Minden's OPP detachment is up to a full complement of four sergeants and 24 constables and is costing the municipality $30,425.50 a month. Deputy Reeve Jerry Rome pointed out that the figure was at top-dollar costs and that, "there will hopefully be a margin in our favour."

The municipality will also hear in June if the province will be providing funding for one constable.

Policing figures have gone up $500,000 across the county.

Couple charged with stealing soil from Minden store

The following are reports from the Haliburton Highlands OPP.

At 2:30 in the morning on May 26, an officer on routine patrol noticed a pick-up truck with a male driver and female passenger leave the ValuMart parking lot and head south on Hwy. 35.

The officer stopped the vehicle on Bobcaygeon Road. The truck contained numerous bags of "Club Pack Super Soil."

Both parties, who are from Snowdon, were charged with theft under $5,000.

Car fire

Three young men from Bolton had to escape their burning car after the driver lost control on the shoulder of County Road 1 and the 1994 Pontiac rolled several times, struck a rock cut and burst into flames.

All three managed to get themselves out of the burning car. All three – a 23-year-old driver, a 20-year-old male passenger and a 24-year-old male passenger – were located later at a residence and transported to Haliburton Hospital, where they were released with minor injuries.

The accident took place on May 20 near Haliburton village.

The driver has been charged with careless driving and failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

Motorcycle collision

A 50-year-old man from Mississauga was driving his 1985 Honda G12 on Elephant Lake Road on May 20 when he lost control on a curve and travelled into the west ditch. He was transported to Bancroft Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Impaired driving

As the result of a RIDE check on Horseshoe Lake Road #1 on May 21, a 29-year-old Grimsby man was charged with impaired operation of a motor vehicle and over 80 mgs.

Break and enters

A 1990 Mercury outboard motor and a five-gallon gas can were stolen from a cottage on Concession 1 in Dysart some time over the past three weeks. Locks were cut off the sheds and the cottage door was pried open.

A 1987 25 hp Mercury outboard motor was stolen from a cottage shed on Shangrila Road in Stanhope. Marks on the dock indicate the suspect may have travelled by boat.

A canoe was stolen from a cottage on Northshore Road in Stanhope.

Toronto Star and Globe and Mail newspaper boxes were stolen from Mountainview Road in Minden. Two electric motors and camping equipment were stolen from a hunt camp in Sherborne some time during the past two weeks.

A 1995 Husquvarna lawn tractor, serial number 012694000106, was stolen from a lawn on County Road 6 in Guilford some time since May 26.

Board budget delayed

The process of developing the Trillium Lakelands District School Board's budget for 2000-2001 is on hold while staff assess the impact of recent announcements by the Ministry of Education.

Those announcements include increased funding for transportation, special education, reading skills and reduced class sizes.

"We're pleased the ministry has acknowledged that additional money is needed," says Judy Saunders, chair of the board, "but since these announcements affect almost every area of spending, we won't be able to approve our budget by the end of May, as we'd hoped."

The Ministry of Education released its revised grant regulations on May 23, but has not yet spelled out how it expects board to allocate the new money.

"Without that information, we can't do our revised calculations," says Ed Hodgins, the board's superintendent of business.

Rebekah Pothaar at Herstmonceux Castle in East Sussex, England, home for her first year of university.

Across the pond

Instead of going to Queen's Kingston campus for their first year of university, Rebekah Pothaar and Jennifer Orpana moved to Herstmonceux Castle in England.

No, the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School graduates didn't skip university; they just took an alternative route.

"Jenn and I applied without the other being aware. Although we were both on student council and had a lot of classes together neither of us was aware the other applied until we were both accepted," Pothaar says.

Both women experienced their first year of university at Queen's international studies centre. A satellite campus, the 15th Century castle was given to the university in 1993 by former student Alfred Bader.

Bader gave the castle and its 200 hectares of surrounding property to Queen's as a thank-you gift. The school accepted Bader, a Viennese Jew, who was interned in Canada as an "enemy alien" during World War II, when both McGill and the University of Toronto did not.

Since it opened in 1994, the East Sussex school has welcomed about 200 students yearly. In September, Pothaar and Orpana became the first Haliburton high school graduates to study there.

Although Queen's owns the property, students from five other Canadian universities — Dalhousie University, University of Toronto, the University of Western Ontario, the University of British Columbia and McGill University — can also take part in the unique international experience. Orpana, who registered for the program through Western, says there were students from Japan, Germany, and Mexico too.

Pothaar studied in England to get a "better feel for culture and to see the world. I wanted to travel but I also wanted to go to university so it combined the two."

"England was ideal because there was no language barrier. I always wanted to go there. My original plan was to do an English major and a lot of writers come from there. Plus, it's the centre of Europe," Pothaar, 19, says. "In Canada it takes us two days to drive out of Ontario; there you take a day trip to France or Belgium."

*"In Canada
it takes us drive out of Ontario;

The Highland Grove resident studied Western European history, German, drama, art history, and English from September to April.

"We'd study in class during the week then we'd see the original on the weekend. We got to see the actual places wars were fought," she says referring to a weekend field trip to Vimy Ridge, France where she saw a memorial to Canadian soldiers. The site also features a field containing unexploded bombs and preserved trenches.

Likewise, Orpana enjoyed seeing the art she was learning about. "It heightens your appreciation of the painting, to see it up close at the gallery," Orpana says.

On another weekend field trip, Pothaar's class went to Berlin, Germany where they saw remnants of World War II, including the area where Hitler's bunker used to be.

During the Christmas break, Pothaar visited relatives in Germany and Holland. She also met the German pen pal with whom she had been corresponding since she was 12.

However, this educational experience — with tuition of $19,000 — doesn't come cheap. Pothaar says she was able to do it because she got an $8,000 scholarship from Queen's. She also used an inheritance from her paternal grandmother. Orpana says her parents paid for her tuition and she worked two summer jobs, before leaving, to cover her personal expenses.

One of the women's Haliburton high school teachers wasn't surprised they jetted out.

"They are both really outgoing people. And they are risk takers," Paul Longo says. "They are the perfect example of students who could mix academic and extra curricular activities and still do well. There was never any down time for either of them."

Although gutsy, both admit they weren't immune to home sickness. Pothaar says she and Orpana cried during the first week away.

Orpana, who grew up in Minden, says they weren't the only ones crying either.

"There was this guy down the hall who was crying and when I asked him why, he said he missed his mother. We were all in the same boat," Orpana says.

England was a great experience

At least, they had each other, Pothaar says.

"It was amazing to just have really comfortable conversation about home. Jen and I got much closer than we ever were in high school," Pothaar says.

Pothaar had an extra bit of home when her boyfriend flew to England two weeks after she left. He got a job and lived 15 minutes away from Pothaar's school.

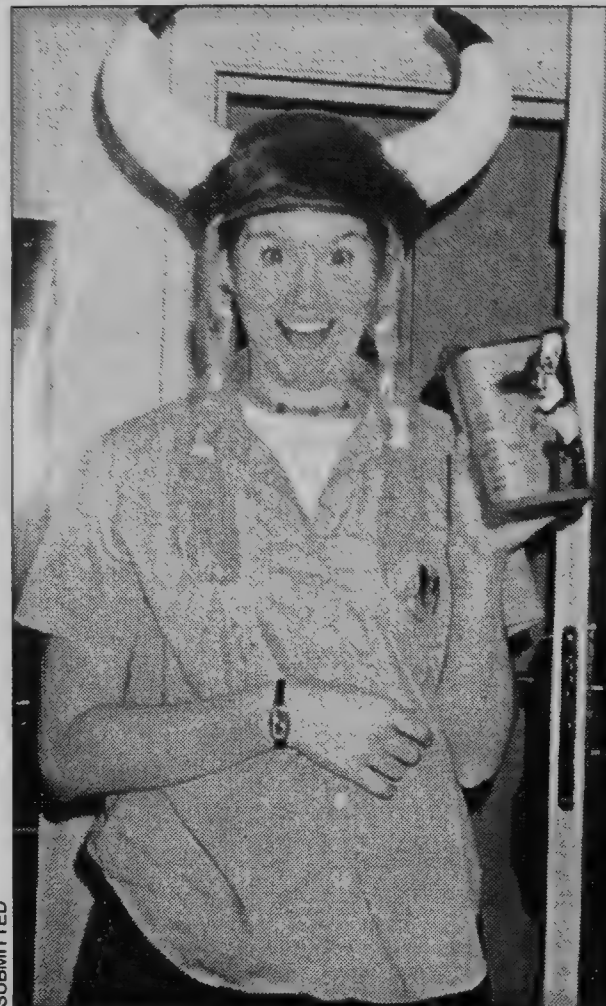

"I was the envy of the girls I hung out with because my boyfriend was with me. They had left theirs behind. Out of seven girls only two of us retained our boyfriends. A school year is a long time to be away," Pothaar says.

Another reminder of home came when Orpana and Pothaar saw former Haliburton English teacher Jackie Miller. The pair coincidentally met up with the high school teacher outside Shakespeare's Globe Theatre in London while waiting to see a performance.

After combating the homesickness, Pothaar says she was faced with another challenge — balancing academia and travel.

"People would be planning these dirt cheap trips but I would have two essays to write. I would ask myself why am I here? I decided I was more interested in travelling."

For St. Patrick's Day, Pothaar missed four days of classes and went to Ireland. She says she thought she would never have the opportunity to Ireland must have made an impression. After being home for roughly two weeks, Pothaar is set to go back May 20. Pothaar says she has to get the travel bug out of her system. To rid herself of the bug she plans to work in Ireland for a year while thinking about what it is she wants to do with her future.

"I'm leaning towards journalism," Pothaar says. "Often people make incorrect decisions and just surf through university getting more in debt — I don't want to do that."

School board offering summer courses

Grade 7, 8 and 9 students in the Trillium Lakelands District School Board will have a new opportunity this summer to improve their basic English and math skills at non-credit courses being held throughout the district.

"This is an excellent opportunity for students who might be having some difficulties to get individualized attention in a low-stress learning environment," says Dr. Andy Scott, superintendent responsible for secondary schools.

The programs for Grade 7 and 8 students will focus on individual needs, and be based on teachers' recommendations. Grade 9 students will have a chance to upgrade their skills in a structured environment. In both cases, students' participation needs to be recommended by their principal.

Information on the programs will be distributed by the principal of the students' school. The programs will be offered from Wednesday, July 5 - Friday, July 21 at sites in Bracebridge, Fenelon Falls, Gravenhurst, Haliburton, Huntsville and Lindsay. A minimum of 15 students will be needed at any given location for the program to go ahead.

Summer credit courses for high school students will be offered at the board's community learning centres in Bracebridge, Gravenhurst, Huntsville and, for the first time, Haliburton. Students in Victoria County will have the opportunity to enroll in summer school programs offered in Peterborough.

Haliburton's Mary Packard to be recognized for 50 years of service to the community

NELIA RAPOSO
Staff Reporter

The first thing you notice when you walk into her home in Echo Hills Legion Apartments is about five framed awards and a picture of her and Lieutenant-Governor Hilary Weston.

Mary Packard is a quiet, humble woman who is getting more attention lately than she thinks she deserves.

The Haliburton resident will receive a Caring Canadian Award from the Governor General in recognition of the 50 years she's volunteered her time in the community. She has already been recognized by the county and the province.

"I was going to turn it down," the 79-year-old says. "But my daughter said, 'mother don't you dare, it is an honour.' I didn't want the paper's to get wind of it. I get embarrassed."

Packard's first volunteer position came as a Brownie leader in Canarvon. She sees many of her former Brownies — now grown women — around town. One of her former Brownies is member of provincial parliament Chris Hodgson's wife, Marie.

"But you don't have to put that in," Packard says to the reporter, trying to deflect the spotlight away from the framed certificate and lapel pin she'll receive from the federal government.

The award is given to people who "selflessly give their time and energy to others," a press release states.

Packard fits the criteria. Judging by the awards she's already recieved, the Haliburton community thinks she's gone above and beyond in her generosity and community involvement.

After her husband left her with four young children, Packard says she had to learn to drive and go to work to support her kids. She says her volunteering career took off when she started working and driving.

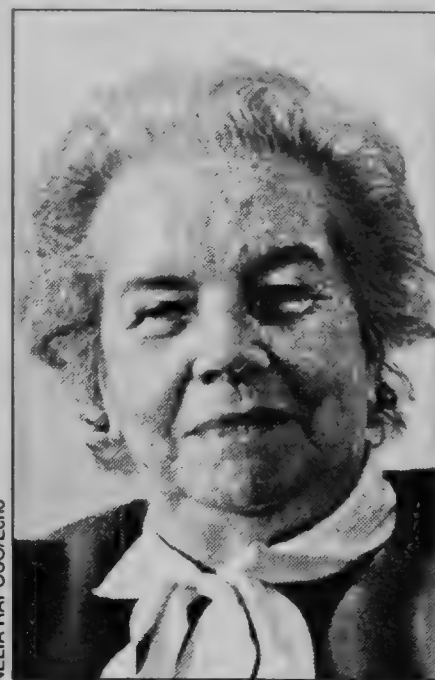

She got a job at the Haliburton library, where she gave up her lunch hour for nearly 10 years to deliver Meals on Wheels.

She would also volunteer her time during Christmas to show movies to school children using the library's projector and film reels.

She says she was one of the first people in the horticultural club but she wouldn't call herself a founding member. Packard still gardens. She says she will be maintaining the gardens in front of the municipal building in Haliburton village and the Haliburton library this summer.

Packard says she's slowing down but she's still involved in helping out at the Extendicare nursing home in Haliburton, she collects money for charities such as

NELIA RAPOSO/Echo

Mary Packard will be honoured by Governor General Adrienne Clarkson

Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) and The Cancer Society.

"I just collect money for charity here. It's easier — there's only about 40 apartments," Packard says of her building.

For fun she attends Scottish Country dancing every other week. She also drives other seniors to community meals sponsored by Home Support.

"My car is always available if people want rides here and there. I think it's just being friendly."

"This is a wonderful community. I don't think I do more than anyone else. There are probably people who do more than I do and aren't getting recognized," Packard, who is curious to know who nominated her, says.

The awards will either be presented in the Peterborough or Ottawa area sometime early fall, Paula Standen, an assistant at member of parliament John F. O'Reilly's office says.

So far, 478 Caring Canadian Awards have been awarded since the program's launch in 1996.

How much does the government know about you?

When Highland Eric Lilius wrote to find out how he can access the information the federal government has filed about him, this is the answer he received:

You can request your file under the Federal Privacy Act. You can go to the nearest post office or library in your area and you should be able to get the required forms needed to make such a request. It will have the information on the form on how to make the request.

There should also be a government publication called InfoSource and if you look there under page 508 for a data bank the Longitudinal Labour Force File, this is where you want to make the request. The form will also give instructions on where to send it.

You can also go to the web site for InfoSource at: http://www.tbs-sct.gc.ca/gos-sog/infosource/Info_1/Srce-Fed-Info_e.html

If you are still unsure about what to do you can call the toll free government information line at 1-800-667-3355 and ask the person for the phone number of the Access to Information and Privacy Office at Human Resources and Development Canada. Once you have this number you can call them and they too will assist you in making your application.

Students Kings and Queens for a Week

Twenty three hand-selected students attend a week long education program at Queen's University

Paul Ferguson

Staff Reporter

A week away from home, without parents or teachers, with 2,200 other students, sounds like a great big party, right?

Well, more like a meeting of the minds.

Twenty-three high school students travelled to Queen's University in Kingston to partake in the Enrichment Mini-Course Program offered to students who are gifted or highly motivated.

The students could choose from many different programs that appealed to them, and study them at an advanced level for one week.

Courses such as engineering, philosophy, creative writing and a jumping live orchestra were offered.

Most of them learned a great deal in their chosen subject area and along the way made some great contacts for the future.

"I learned a lot. I took a creative writing course and learned a lot of things about publishing and things I should be doing in my writing that I'm not. The professor gave us her e-mail address so we can send her our stories and she will edit them for us," Vanessa Smith said.

Students who chose engineering made bottle rockets,

PAUL FERGUSON/Echo

Gifted and highly motivated students

For some of these students, it was the second time they attended the Enrichment Mini-Course Program at Queen's university despite having to pay for it out of their own pockets.

and took on the dubious task of constructing a cardboard chair that had to hold 150 pounds for three days.

The week also served as more than just an academic learning experience. It gave students a little perspective on their futures.

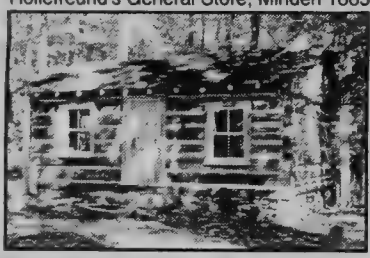

The opportunity to learn more about a variety of subject areas will help them when it comes time to make tough decisions in the next few years.

"It was a good chance to explore options that you might not explore, but you're still interested in," Katharine Hagerman said.

Maybe best off all for the students though, was the chance to get a feel for what university life would be like by staying in residence and eating gourmet cafeteria food.

"We learned a lot, but another big part was the social aspect of it. We met a lot of other students and interesting people that you wouldn't meet here in Haliburton," Katharine said.

Whether it's Queen's trying to lure students for future enrollment, or just one great learning experience, the students left a little smarter and little more wide-eyed.

Fly like an eagle, and it's free

ERIK MARTENSSON

Staff Reporter

The Haliburton-Stanhope Airport is extending an opportunity to soar among the clouds during their 7th Annual Young Eagles Day.

The Young Eagle program is for students between the ages of 8 and 17 and gives each child a safe, enjoyable and educational flight in the skies above the county at no cost.

The program was started by the Experimental Aircraft Association (EAA) of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, in 1992 with the primary objective of involving more young people in aviation.

At Stanhope Airport, more than 700 local young people have enjoyed a cloud-hopping flight since 1994.

This year's flying will run from 9 am to 3 pm Saturday June 3 and Sunday June 4, weather permitting. Aspiring fly-boys and girls will need parent/guardian signatures to participate. Forms will be available that day at the airport. Forms are also available at the airport office.

Over 560,000 young people worldwide have experienced the thrill of flight in a small airplane under the EAA Young Eagles Program. The goal is to reach one million Young Eagles by 2003, the year of the 100th anniversary of the Wright brothers' first powered flight and the 50th anniversary of the EAA.

Each young eagle will receive an official Young Eagle Certificate signed by the pilot following their flight experience. The name of each participant is also entered into the World's largest Logbook which is on permanent display at the EAA Air Adventure Museum in Oshkosh, Wisconsin and on the Web at www.young eagles.com.

For more information on Young Eagles' Day contact the airport at 754-2611.

CNIB Raffle raises $4,100

Haliburton Advisory Board Chairman Ron Barr presents Canadian National Institute for the Blind District Manager Doug Downer with a cheque of $4,100 as volunteer Bill Hartin, who sold 2400 raffle tickets, looks on. Money raised will help provide services to almost 70 CNIB clients in Haliburton County.

Quality senior health care goal of new foundation

The president of a newly formed foundation designed to improve seniors' access to quality health care, will be speaking at the annual meeting of the Haliburton County Home Support Services on June 7.

Launched in Toronto on October 25, 1999 as part of the United Nations International Year of Older Persons, the Running to Daylight Foundation will provide elderly patients with patient representatives who will help them access quality health care, act as intermediaries with health care professionals when needed and educate the patient and family.

Seniors in the Toronto and Ottawa area who become seriously ill will soon have someone they can call on to help them and their families navigate the often dehumanizing and frustrating medical maze of hospitals and the complexities of caregiving in the community.

Patient representatives mean greater access to quality health care for the elderly, said Globerman. The Foundation's name, Running to Daylight, refers to a prospect of a better life for elderly patients. "Improved access will mean the elderly have the opportunity and optimism they need to beat the odds, live their life with dignity," he added.

The Foundation was established as a memorial to Globerman's father, Ben, who died at age 85 in Ottawa three years ago after facing numerous illnesses. While Globerman's father was supported by a loving family, "the whole hospitalization experience was very, very stressful and too dehumanizing for him and us," he added.

Home Support's annual general meeting begins at 9:30 in the Mountbatten Room of the Haliburton Legion.

Rural residents getting a pat on the back

Awarding people that show outstanding achievements

Nominations are now being accepted for the Foundation for Rural Living's 2nd annual Awards of Rural Excellence.

Initiated in 1999, the Awards of Rural Excellence recognize and celebrate communities, communities of interest, organizations and groups who are doing great things to improve the quality of life in rural Ontario.

"These awards are a great way to bring attention to the tremendous work and innovation in our rural communities," says Eugene Lammerding, chair of the Foundation for Rural Living. "Last year winners told us that recognizing their work with an award gave them satisfaction and pride in their achievements. We hope to have even more nominations this year as we continue to recognize rural Ontario's outstanding initiatives."

This year the Foundation is building on the success of their first year with an expanded awards program. There are nine award categories: Outstanding Voluntarism; Innovation in Community Economic Development; Contribution to Economic Growth; Rural Youth Achievement; Excellent in Formal Co-operative Models; Excellence in Community Leadership; Outstanding Partnership in the Voluntary Sector; Outstanding Partnership with Business; and Outstanding Philanthropic Action.

The efforts being recognized with each award must take place in rural Ontario. 'Rural' includes communities with a population under 50,000. Amalgamated rural municipalities where the population may exceed 50,000 are also eligible. An independent selection committee made up of practitioners in each field will help in the selection process.

"The process to select the awards is a useful way to have an initiative reviewed by a third-party team of qualified peers," says Lammerding. "The expertise and dedication of our review teams ensure a fair and thorough review of each nomination."

The Foundation for Rural Living is a non-profit, charitable organization dedicated to building healthy, sustainable rural communities and enhancing the agricultural industry in Ontario.

Nomination forms must be postmarked no later than June 30, 2000. For more information or nomination forms, please contact Christine Black at the Foundation for Rural Living at 519-826-4128.

Whitby's mental health centre open for business

The Memory Clinic at the Whitby Mental Health Centre is dedicated to the early diagnosis and intervention for individuals with memory disorders. It is a state of the art clinic, designed to provide a complete assessment of dementia, communication of the diagnosis to the client and their caregivers, and referral to appropriate community support services.

Clients will receive a comprehensive assessment with input from various specialties including neurology, geriatric medicine, geriatric psychiatry, nursing, occupational therapy, neuropsychology, social work, pharmacy, nutrition and physiotherapy.

The assessment will generally require two to three visits and include the completion of a questionnaire, an initial assessment by a registered nurse or occupational therapist, and a one-half day clinic visit for assessment by a neurologist, geriatrician and geriatric psychiatrist. There is an optional follow-up appointment for patients and families/caregivers to be informed of the outcome of the assessment. At this visit, referrals are made to appropriate community supports as well as further recommendations made.

The Memory Clinic will assess any individuals with new onset of cognitive impairment. This may include:

- Individuals whose diagnosis is unclear.
- Individuals whose families request a specialist opinion.
- Individuals with unusual presentation.
- Individuals whose cognitive difficulties may be related to psychiatric disorder, complex medical problems, and drug interactions.

Individuals with stable developmental disorders or acquired brain injuries will not be assessed.

The WMHC Memory Clinic works in partnership with the University Health Network - Toronto General Hospital, Toronto Western Hospital and Princess Margaret Hospital - Neosciences Program. The health professionals will come from both WMHC and the UHN, allowing for a sharing of knowledge and experience from both facilities. At present the UHN Memory Clinic is involved in a number of research activities and is part of the University of Toronto Centre for Research in Neurodegenerative Disorders, under the leadership of Dr.

Peter St. George-Hyslop, a world renowned leader in the field of Alzheimer genetics.

A referral from the individual's physician or specialist outlining the presenting problems, current medications that the person is taking, any diagnostic tests that have been completed and the name and telephone number or a reliable family member/caregiver is required. Once the referral letter has been received you will be contacted to set up an appointment.

If you require additional information on the Memory Clinic at Whitby Mental Health Centre or wish to make a referral, you can reach the Memory Clinic by calling:

Home and Vacation show returns

22nd annual event features a blend of new and familiar exhibitors

In the 21 years since it began, the Haliburton Home & Vacation show has become one of the most keenly anticipated and best attended events of the season. Exhibitors enjoy the opportunity to display their products and promote their services, while visitors can gather information and meet area business owners and their staff in a relaxed, friendly and unhurried environment.

Over 120 exhibitors will welcome visitors to this year's show. Many of the paricipating businesses have been taking part in the show for ten years or more. They will join a number of new exhibitors to create a show that organizers anticipate will have items of interest to every visitor.

A project of the Haliburton Curling Club, the show welcomes two additional sponsors this year: The Haliburton County Echo and 105.5 FM radio.

Show dates are: Friday, June 3, 4 p.m. to 9 p.m.; Saturday, June 4, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Sunday, June 5, noon to 4 p.m.

As in the past, the Dysart arena and Haliburton Curling Club will house the indoor exhibits, while the parking lot in front of the buildings will provide additional display space, as well as a refreshment tent. Admission to the show is just $1.00 for adults, with children admitted

Emmerson Lumber, a member of the "Castle" group, is a major supporter of the Home Show, and once again will host a supplier pavilion which occupies half of the curling club. Emmerson's presence will be supported by 14 building trade manufacturers and suppliers displaying the latest in home and cottage products. Also on hand through Emmerson Lumber will be the Husqvarna products trailer and the Pink Panther

Insulation balloon.

The other half of the curling club will feature many other exhibits.

As always, the arena will be a busy place this year. You won't want to miss this opportunity to check out retailers offering goods at special show prices.

If hunger strikes while you browse through the show, step outside where The Haliburton Curling Club will again be providing a large refreshment tent offering hamburgers, hot dogs, pizza, beer and lots of live entertainment throughout the weekend.

The Haliburton Home & Vacation Show is a must see for any home or cottage owner. Come out and enjoy the fun, meet your neighbours and talk to the friendly exhibitors. For show information call Wayne Hussey at (705) 457-2892.

Things to do, things to learn:

A visit to the Home & Vacation show is always enjoyable because of the people you meet. At left, Norm Barry of The Pump Shop answers questions. Below, campfire songs from Camp Medeba at the 1999 show.

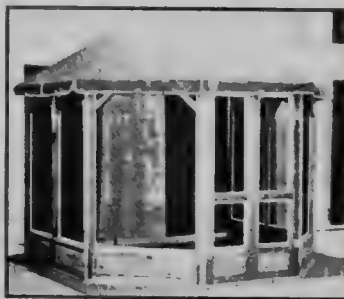

Making friends:

■ The Home & Vacation show brings local businesses and consumers together in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere, where the feeling of a small town predominates. Even if you're not looking to buy a specific product or service, a visit to the show is a terrific way to get to know the people behind the businesses.

Smokers around the globe encouraged to butt out

Haliburton County is joining the rest of the world in celebrating World No-Tobacco Day on May 31.

Locally, the Haliburton, Kawartha, Pine Ridge District Health Unit is promoting World No-Tobacco Day (WNTD) and encouraging people to keep their cars smoke-free by distributing keychains and stickers to customers visiting Curry Motors. Keychains and stickers are also being distributed to families at WeeCare and CHACE Daycares.

To celebrate WNTD, preschoolers and school-aged children at CHACE Daycare in Minden will be planting trees in the county fairgrounds at 4 p.m.

In 1988, The World Health Organization (WHO) identified tobacco use as one of its most significant public health concerns. WNTD was established to raise awareness of the international impact of tobacco use and promote a tobacco-free environment. The day provides an opportunity to educate smokers about the dangers associated with tobacco use. On this day, tobacco users worldwide are encouraged to end their addiction by quitting for at least one day.

"WNTD is a perfect opportunity to encourage people to quit smoking. Refraining from smoking in their vehicles is a good first step," says Anne-Marie Cyr, a Public Health nurse with the Health Unit. "Our hope is that people will participate in WNTD and recognize that if they can quit smoking for one day, they may be able to quit for good."

Statistics from Ontario's Cancer Prevention Blueprint 2000 show that smoking causes at least eight out of every 10 cases of lung cancer in Ontario. Smoking also contributes to many other kinds of cancer, including cancer of the larynx, esophagus, kidney, pancreas, cervix and bladder. The report also shows that lung cancer rates in women are still increasing, with lung cancer now killing more women in Ontario than breast cancer.

The good news is that a Heart Health Needs Assessment done in October 1998 shows a decrease in the percentage of current smokers in the HKPR and Peterborough area between 1990 and 1996 from 32 percent to 26 percent. This decrease was dramatic and encouraging, as was the drop in Ontario from 30 percent to 24 percent.

"While these numbers are encouraging, we are still hoping days like WNTD will encourage even more smokers to quit," says Cyr.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT NOTICE NOTICE OF STUDY COMMENCEMENT HIGHWAY 35 IMPROVEMENTS

THE STUDY

Morrison Hershfield Limited has been retained by the Ministry of Transportation to complete the Detail Design for Highway 35 from the Victoria/Haliburton County boundary, northerly for 8.1 kilometers to Miner's Bay (W.P. 358-97-00).

Various options are being considered to upgrade Highway 35 to increase capacity and safety. The Ministry is proposing to:

- Construct two new passing lanes and make improvements to existing passing lanes;
- Widen the shoulders;
- Improve roadside drainage;
- Resurface the highway;
- Correct areas of frost heave;
- Establish a full clear zone within the right-of-way by widening rock cuts and
- Construct left turn lanes at three locations into the Moore Lake Estates Road

THE PROCESS

This study will follow an approved planning process for Group "B" projects under the Class Environmental Assessment for Provincial Transportation facilities (1997) with the opportunity for public input throughout. A Public Information Centre will be held during the study and a notice advising of its time and location will be published in local papers. Upon completion of the study, a Transportation Environmental Study Report (TESR) will be available for public review and comment. Another notice will be published at that time.

709 IN MEMORIAM

PRIEST, GORDON - In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather who passed away May 29, 1991.
As time unfolds another year
Memories keep you ever near,
Silent thoughts of times together
Hold memories that will last forever.
Sadly missed and always remembered by daughter Elaine, son-in-law Randal and family.

ROBERTSON - In loving memory of our parents, ELWIN (Feb. 9, 1982) and MARY (June 2, 1985).
Forever missed, Karen and Don.

STAMP, BRANT - In loving memory of our uncle who passed away
May 28, 1992.
A special person, a special face,
Someone we loved and can never replace.

With aching hearts and tears unseen,
We wish your absence was only a dream.

Sadly missed by nieces and nephews Alberta, Bernie, Cheryl,
David, Erin and families.

STAMP, BRANT - In loving memory of our dear brother who passed away suddenly on May 28, 1992.
A special smile and a special face,
And in our hearts a special place.
No words we speak will ever say
How much we miss you every day.
Lovingly remembered by Marjorie and George, Lyle and Carol, and Truman.

CRAIGMYLE GRADUATION

At the Spring Convocation of Saint Mary's University, Halifax, Nova Scotia, on May 12, 2000, Dianne Craigmyle received her Bachelor of Arts degree, majoring in Anthropology. Dianne, who is the daughter of Lynn and Carol Craigmyle of Haliburton, will be spending the next year working and studying in Switzerland.

Wilberforce Heritage earns Millennium grant

Since the Gentlemen of Song formed a few years ago, they have stirred many with their renditions of music that ranges from hymns to old favourites to quite modern pieces. Many in the group would have been pleased just to get together and enjoy singing. But then performances began and invitations continue to roll in.

Recently, their schedule has become a very busy one. They sang at the Highland Grove Reformed Church on May 28. They will be special guests, along with Vern Huntington, at a service of music and worship at the Wilberforce United Church on Sunday, June 4, at 11:30 a.m. After this performance, The Gentlemen and their leaders, Marg Jeske and Elsie Lewis, will take a break for the summer. Audiences have appreciated the fine choral music this group has willingly and joyfully presented. We wish them a restful summer with a song in their hearts.

The Wilberforce Heritage was very pleased to be informed recently by the Millennium Bureau of Canada that it had been successful in its application for a grant to help in its millennium project, the publication of Gertrude LeRoy Miller's "Mustard Plasters and Handcars". This book is about her experiences as a nurse at the Wilberforce Red Cross Outpost Hospital in the early 1930s. The book has gone to press and will be formally launched at the Outpost on Saturday, June 24 between 1 and 4 p.m. The books will be for sale at that time.

Rollerskating has started again on Saturday evenings at the Monmouth arena. It's great to see so many young people using the outdoor basketball court by the Lloyd Watson Centre.

Program preparations for the event to celebrate the unveiling of the quilted banner are well underway. This millennium project by local women takes place on Sunday, June 11 at the Lloyd Watson Centre. Doors open at 1:30 p.m. The one-act play, Rags and Dreams, by Peggy Sample, begins at 2 p.m. It is a drama with choral music which, with its story of quilt making over the years, supports the theme of the program well. The unveiling of the quilted banner will follow the play. The banner is composed of blocks designed, constructed and quilted by local women to portray many aspects of life in this area since its settlement. The program will end with a special afternoon tea. Admission to this year 2000 event will be by donation to help cover costs of the play and food.

Families make return

Welcome home to two Guilford families. John, Judy and Emerald Henderson are back from Fiji, where John had been employed for the past 18 months with Fiji Telecom. Also welcome home to Maggie and Jim Milnes, from Coral Harbour on Southampton Island in Nunavut, where she has been priest for the past two years.

Sid and Louise Cooper attended a retired teachers conference in Toronto two weeks ago.

Many relatives of Claude Woodcock's attended his funeral on Wednesday, May 24, 2000 in Westin. As well as Woodcocks from Haliburton, Sissons, Chumbleys, Coopers and Marilyn Gibbons attended. Sympathies are extended to his widow, Wynn.

Gerald Morrison, son of Perry and Kay, has just spent two weeks in various parts of Africa, one being Cape Town, the other Mozambique, on behalf of Mennonite Emergency Development Agency.

Congratulations to Willard McPhail, who celebrated his 80th birthday at Maple Lake United Church on May 27.

Karl Feuerpfel, mechanic and President of The Haliburton Highlands Time Travellers car club, goes over a 1957 Ford Thunderbird at their Spring Tune-Up event. The 327 horsepower vintage beauty will be turning heads at the club's first event at the Kawartha Dairy in Minden on Thursday June 15th.

ERIK MARTENSSON/Echo

Shifting into summer

DEREK MALCOLM

Staff Reporter

There's nothing like a tune-up to get things moving for an exciting summer of cruisin' and schmoozin'.

Members of The Haliburton Highland Time Travellers vintage car club gathered at Elstone Motors on Highway 118 Thursday in preparation for this summer's events.

As mechanics Garry Burk, Dave Robertson, and club president Karl Feuerpfel made sure each car was in good working order, other members were busy preparing a pot-luck banquet for the club's first meeting of the season.

"We generally just cruise," said Burk, former president and founder of the club.

Reliving summer nights of the past, The Time Travellers cruise weekly attracting other car clubs from around Ontario. Their first event will take place at the Kawartha Dairy in Minden on June 15th from 6:30 p.m. until dusk, and will continue weekly throughout the summer switching between Minden and the Haliburton town docks. And if that's not enough vintage muscle for you, there will be a Canada Day show along the river in Minden that drew over 40 cars last year.

This group of sociable car-enthusiasts have been showing off their classic autos independently for the last two years after splitting from the Historical Automobile Society of Canada to go on their own.

"It's for people who like old cars and like to get together," said Burk while looking over a gleaming white 1957 Ford Thunderbird convertible.

The Time Travellers will continue to cruise during the summer months until their last event on September 14th.
